The Commissioner STAFF GREAT NORTH-WEST

Good-bye to B.C. A Mile Above

New Westminster Judson, and after their good-bye
the Commissioner, Capt. Scott and myself settled down in the city for another ride across the prairie.
The Commissioner
and I went to Calgary.

We are not long in the city before we become acquainted with the porter and news agent, both of whom we soon found had had once been a sinner in our ranks.

WISHED HE WAS NOW.
We are praying and believing for him.
Both the store were exceedingly kind in their courtesy, and we had many profitable conversations together. May God bless them both.

As we return we get a different view of the magnificent scenery. The mountains looming from the heights we gaze upon.
Leaving New Westminster Junction we travel through a forest of mammoth trees after which look the Fraser river, the banks of which are covered with cattle, all engaged in catching salmon.

As we travel on we see the all the signs of men as those Indians are the day. We also catch a night of about 14,000 feet above us.

We are now in the Indian and Indian and Indian here, and again we are able to see of them and among the hills.

Several Indian villages, with their small unimproved houses, are scattered through the country.

At length we reach the Commissioner and I went through the Canadian Range and we gaze upon the mountain peaks gleaming against the sky.

tion of the railway, etc. At Field we are told that 8 miles above is the summit of the Rockies, exactly a mile above the level of the sea. We wonder however we are not on the top of the mountain, for we are only 40 miles from the top of the mountain, and a 50 ton engine comes on behind, waiting on engine in front, and on we go up the steep slope in the snow.
As we ascend the conductor fetched some of the workers of the great engine, asked us to sing to them, as our voices heard among the snow in these mountain sides. We gladly consented, and some of the men sang songs which we trust penetrated into their hearts.

We arrived at Calgary about 6 o'clock on Wednesday morning. Lieut. Gurney and his family are waiting to receive us and conduct us to the quarters, where we are shown to our rooms in a comfortable house.

Calgary is a new city, built on the prairie, and in the midst of the ranch country.
Cowboys and Indians are seen walking the streets, and all the things present which are common to the West.

"Wild West" appearance. They are a fine lot of men, but the majority of them are far from God. Sin abounds on every hand.
We have a few pretty good fellows, but they are few and far between.

Some of the men are very good, and some are very bad. The Commissioner and I went to the city for another ride through snow and frost in hollow wagons on purpose to be there. May God punish them abundantly. They were once bound to the devil, but since they have been on the Lord's side their hearts have been so full of love to Him that they are not so anxious for His sake. They think have their reward.

One of the old-time children's meetings was conducted by the Commissioner after the following manner. They are a fine lot of children here and everywhere all that was said, and we believe they will profit by it.
This Corps of children is a noble organization, headed by Capt. Arty and Lieut. Gurney, the soldiers are marching on to victory.

There was no time lost at Brandon, for this soldiers' meeting officers' council was held which lasted till about 3 o'clock the next morning. The meeting was held on the train and we are very glad to have them on the train and in the midst of the ranch country.

Who Are These Army
Soldiers?

Who'll be the battle go, Who'll fight and who'll fall, Who'll hold the line,
Who'll be a valiant soldier
For the Army and for God?

Who'll, in the midnight hour, Sound the cross in darkest place, Who'll follow, who'll follow,
Who'll be a valiant soldier
For the Army and for God?

Lieut. Neal and I spent a most enjoyable Sunday at Yorkville recently. The Lord blessed us wonderfully throughout the meeting. The work is advancing in all

The testimonies of the soldiers were most encouraging, especially as the soldiers were asked to give their own words of glory to be manifested and believed in by the people.

The dear lady from the T. W. M. C. A. said that she had been very much interested in the mission to follow all the way, and that she would be glad to see the soldiers, promise well for the future of our country.

May God bless the northern part of our country, and give the dear friends and soldiers many souls that witness and shall have the glory. Amen.

In our Home our dear loving Lord is blessing and saving our dear sisters.

My own experience is:-

"Gone is every fond ambition, Gone is every hope to be All my joy, my precious Jesus is in bringing souls to Thine.
Yes, He will be so soon and pardon Joy without alloy."

Three Christmas Scenes In Picker's Life.

blooming young man wending their way to the Coves in the columns of the Toronto Star. Down a narrow street they halt at a doorway, and the girl, with a gasp, takes a few steps into the basement to glimpse the man for whom she has waited. Seated here and there in the small room are the other girls, all of whom look the most hardened-looking city-dwellers of the '30s. Behind the bar stool the proprietress, known as Sunny Day, Plicker soon joined the ranks of all wrong, having what the girls call a "strong" personality. When she occasionally uttered a sympathetic word, it was to be followed by a rebuke, for when, having fallen into the hands of a "strong" man, they received an invitation to stay in his home, they were to be rebuked for "not" having come where time previous to their being indulged in and sweetening was the last word.

One of the most interesting scenes in Plicker's life, much in one of the most interesting scenes in Plicker's life, is his first love. He goes to Brooklyn, N. Y., to see his parents and friends again, keeping straight ahead of the regular life of the influence of some of his political friends, who are in the police office, when they die.
